THINK DEMPWOLF HAS KIDNAPPED LITTLE SON

Borrowed Child Yesterday Morning to Take it to Circus and has not Been Seen Since

MOTHER THINKS HE HAS TAKEN IT TO PUEBLO

Taking advantage of the fact that a children's show was in town, Theodore Dempwolf, according to a report made to the police, kidnapped his 18-month-old son from his divorced wife yesterday. Dempwolf's mother, with whom he made his home at 425 West Santa Fe avenue, told the police late last night when inquiries were made that she had not seen her son since noon. Dempwolf is believed to have gone with the child to Pueblo, Colo., where he formerly lived.

Early in the present term of court the Dempwolfs were divorced after a hearing behind closed doors. The husband filed suit and a crossbill was entered by the wife. Judge Reynolds awarded the custody of the child to the wife, but granted the husband permission to see it daily between 2 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The wife was ordered to keep the child within the jurisdiction of the court.

Dempwolf has been taking advantage of the court's permission to see the child with more or less regularity and the wife was not surprised when he called yesterday morning at the apartment at 410 North Second street, where Mrs. Dempwolf makes her home with her sister. Mrs. Dempwolf said he came to the house at 8 o'clock and pleaded for permission to take the boy to see the parade of the Centry Bros. dog and pony show. Mrs. Dempwolf said she yielded to his plea and he went away with the child.

She waited in vain all day for him to return, she says. Late last night convinced that he didn't mean to come back, she reported the alleged kidnapping to the police.

Before the report was received at headquarters Dempwolf had had several opportunities to start east over the Santa Fe, and the police today felt convinced that he had succeeded in getting beyond the jurisdiction of the district court. As already told, his mother says he has not been seen at the house since noon yesterday.

When the divorce action was started the Dempwolfs owned a restaurant on South Second street. In her action Mrs. Dempwolf stated that she furnished the money with which to start the business. When divorce was granted Dempwolf was ordered to pay her $25 a month alimony. He has paid her nothing, she says. The restaurant business was sold, and Mrs. Dempwolf has had to work to support herself. She is heartbroken over the disappearance of the child, and her grief is accentuated by the fact that she has no funds with which to prosecute a search for it.

Men Who Bring Their Wives With Them

The men's clothes store that isn't quite sure of its values isn't overly anxious to have men bring their wives with them on purchasing expeditions.

We like nothing better than to have the "better half" come in and look over what is offered here.

This applies particularly to STEIN-BLOCH SMART CLOTHES for men who are smart enough to let their wives help make the dollars count.

Our experience is that about nine times out of ten, these wives choose STEIN-BLOCH CLOTHES the first time. And about ten times out of ten "hubby" is entrusted with making a similar choice the time following.

The best thing about STEIN-BLOCH customers is that they stick.
